Five Songs, Five Big Questions

1. Redemption Song

- What are the legacies of international institutions?

2. Zimbabwe

- What does decolonization change, and what does it not change?

3. One Love

- When and why do crises lead to cooperations?

4. War

- Why do countries want different things from global institutions?

5. No, Woman, No Cry

- Why are our lives more globally connected than we think?

Honorable mentions... if only we had more time:

Buffalo Soldier, I Shot the Sheriff, Get up Stand up, Jamming

Redemption Song

- Old pirates, yes, they rob I;
- Sold I to the merchant ships,
- Minutes after they took I
- From the bottomless pit.

- We forward in this generation
- Triumphantly.

The Slave Trade and the Origins of Mistrust in Africa†

By NATHAN NUNN AND LEONARD WANTCHEKON*

We show that current differences in trust levels within Africa can be traced back to the transatlantic and Indian Ocean slave trades. Combining contemporary individual-level survey data with historical data on slave shipments by ethnic group, we find that individuals whose ancestors were heavily raided during the slave trade are less trusting today. Evidence from a variety of identification strategies suggests that the relationship is causal. Examining causal mechanisms, we show that most of the impact of the slave trade is through factors that are internal to the individual, such as cultural norms, beliefs, and values. The Political Legacy of American Slavery

Avidit Acharya, Stanford University

Matthew Blackwell, Harvard University

Maya Sen, Harvard University

We show that contemporary differences in political attitudes across counties in the American South in part trace their origins to slavery's prevalence more than 150 years ago. Whites who currently live in Southern counties that had high shares of slaves in 1860 are more likely to identify as a Republican, oppose affirmative action, and express racial resentment and colder feelings toward blacks. We show that these results cannot be explained by existing theories, including the theory of contemporary racial threat. To explain the results, we offer evidence for a new theory involving the historical persistence of political attitudes. Following the Civil War, Southern whites faced political and economic incentives to reinforce existing racist norms and institutions to maintain control over the newly freed African American population. This amplified local differences in racially conservative political attitudes, which in turn have been passed down locally across generations.

Zimbabwe

- Every man got a right to decide his own destiny
- And in this judgment, there is no partiality
- So arm in arms, with arms, we'll fight this little struggle
- Cause that's the only way we can, overcome our little trouble
- No more internal power struggle
- We come together to overcome the little trouble
- Soon we'll find out who is the real revolutionary
- Cause I don't want my people to be contrary

Resolutions passed by the UNGA are nonbinding, which means they have no legal power. Rather, they are viewed as an expression of the will of the international community on a given topic.

No Woman, No Cry

- And we would cook corn meal porridge – of which I'll share with you
- My feet is my only carriage
- So I've got to push on through
- But while I'm gone, I mean
- Everything is gonna be alright

What International Political Economy Asks

- How do historical legacies shape present-day cooperation?
- How do domestic politics affect international outcomes?
- Why do crises create institutions?
- Why is global cooperation necessary—but always imperfect?
- ...

No, Qilins, No Cry

- Said I remember when we first stepped in
- The halls of New Bund, not sure where to begin
- At NYU Shanghai, we found our way
- Good friends we met, oh, good friends we kept
- Along the way...
- In classrooms, in moments, and paths we create
- We grow bold, we grow strong, we celebrate
- So dry your tears, I say
- No, Qilins, no cry
- Together, Qilins, we rise

Thank You!
